2. Flared Jeans

Flared jeans were another popular trend of the 1970s. They were worn by both men and women, and they came in a variety of washes, from light blue to dark denim. Flared jeans were often paired with platform shoes, and they created a long and lean silhouette.

3. Disco Fashion

Disco fashion was all about glamour and excess. It was characterized by shiny fabrics, sequins, and metallic accents. Disco fashion was often worn to nightclubs, and it helped to create a festive and celebratory atmosphere.

4. Punk Fashion

Punk fashion was a reaction to the glamour and excess of disco fashion. It was characterized by ripped clothing, safety pins, and spiked hair. Punk fashion was often worn by young people who were angry and disillusioned with the status quo.

5. Hippie Fashion

Hippie fashion was all about peace and love. It was characterized by flowing fabrics, ethnic prints, and natural materials. Hippie fashion was often worn by young people who were interested in alternative lifestyles.

6. Maxi Dresses

Maxi dresses were a popular trend of the early 1970s. They were made from flowing fabrics, and they often featured bold prints or colors. Maxi dresses were often worn to formal events, but they could also be dressed down for more casual occasions.

7. Jumpsuits

Jumpsuits were another popular trend of the 1970s. They were made from a variety of fabrics, and they came in a variety of styles, from tailored to casual. Jumpsuits were often worn to work or to school, but they could also be dressed up for more formal occasions.

8. Wrap Dresses

Wrap dresses were a popular trend of the mid-1970s. They were made from a variety of fabrics, and they came in a variety of colors and prints. Wrap dresses were often worn to work or to school, but they could also be dressed up for more formal occasions.

9. Overalls

Overalls were a popular trend of the late 1970s. They were made from a variety of fabrics, and they came in a variety of colors and styles. Overalls were often worn to work or to school, but they could also be dressed up for more formal occasions.

10. Leggings

Leggings were a popular trend of the late 1970s. They were made from a variety of fabrics, and they came in a variety of colors and patterns. Leggings were often worn to workout or to lounge around the house, but they could also be dressed up for more formal occasions.

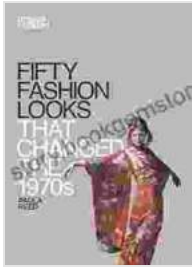

These are just a few of the many fashion looks that changed the 1970s. The 1970s was a decade of experimentation and change, and these looks reflected the changing attitudes and values of the time.
