

Soutine, Chagall, and the Outsiders of Montparnasse: A Tale of Friendship, Art, and Exile

The Outsiders of Montparnasse and Their Friendship

The Outsiders of Montparnasse were a close-knit group of friends. They often spent time together at the Café de la Rotonde, and they often discussed art and life. They were always there for each other, and they supported each other through thick and thin.

Soutine and Chagall were particularly close friends. They often shared a studio, and they often worked on each other's paintings. Soutine was a great influence on Chagall, and he helped Chagall to develop his own unique style of painting. Modigliani was more of a loner than Soutine and Chagall, but he was always welcomed by the group.

The friendship of the Outsiders of Montparnasse was a source of strength and support for them all. It helped them to survive the difficult times, and it helped them to achieve their dreams.
