

Sunset Song by Lewis Grassic Gibbon: A Classic of Scottish Literature

Sunset Song is a classic Scottish novel by Lewis Grassic Gibbon. It was first published in 1932 and tells the story of a young woman's coming-of-age during the First World War. The novel is set in the fictional village of Kinraddie in the north-east of Scotland. It follows the life of Chris Guthrie, a young woman who grows up on a farm with her family. As the war breaks out, Chris's life is turned upside down. Her brothers are sent to fight, and her father dies. Chris is left to care for her mother and the farm. She must also come to terms with her own feelings about the war and her place in the world.

Setting

Sunset Song is set in the fictional village of Kinraddie in the north-east of Scotland. The village is based on Gibbon's own childhood home of Auchterless. The novel's setting is important because it provides a backdrop for the story's themes of war, loss, and identity. Kinraddie is a close-knit community where everyone knows everyone else. The war has a profound impact on the village, and the villagers are forced to come to terms with the loss of their loved ones and the changes that the war brings.
